“Airway Management After Medical Emergencies”

REQUIRED CE COURSE

“COVID-19 Update”

Although medical emergencies in the oral and maxillofacial surgeon’s office are uncommon, when they do occur they can be quite serious. Preprocedural assessment of the patient will likely help the practitioner prevent the emergencies and knowing when to go slow or say no. Airway emergencies are the most devastating and can be largely resolved with good skills and practice. Cardiovascular, neurological, and, endocrine emergencies are most frequently treated pharmacologically. With the addition of the COVID-19 pandemic, patient approaches require a high clinical suspicion of exposure and an even higher quality of PPE for practitioners, their entire office staff, and the patient.

At the end of the talk, the attendees will be able to understand, plan, and rehearse the cognitive aspects of the following:

- 1 - Preprocedural assessment of the patient presenting to their office
- 2 - Create plans and cognitive aids for airway, cardiovascular, neurologic, endocrine, and special problems such as malignant hyperthermia or hematologic emergencies
- 3 - Plan routine periodic office drills/simulated emergencies to enhance their skill sets and understanding
- 4 - Understand and plan the specialized care of the patient who may have been exposed to any pandemic including COVID-19.
- 5 - Acquire the appropriate PPE (personal protective equipment) for surgeon and their staff in order to treat patients with highly infectious problems.

“ACLS/BLS and PALS Certification Courses”

REQUIRED CE COURSES

ACLS/BLS: These programs will require a pre-course didactic video review and completion of several quizzes. Class time will be spent completing skills and scenario stations. Groups of 6 doctors with teams of 3 completing cases.

Participants who do not complete the pre-course video and quizzes prior to the course will not be eligible to attend the skills day. Once you register for the courses, videos, quizzes, textbook and prep packet will be emailed to each participant.

PALS: The official “no stress” program developed by the American Heart Association and The American Academy of Pediatrics, our PALS Program is designed to emphasize early recognition and management of potentially life threatening situations in the pediatric patient rather than merely “running code”. Through the use of stress free case based scenarios and interactive skills stations, participants will receive instruction in the recognition and management of respiratory failure and shock, basic life support and airway management, rhythm disturbances, vascular access, trauma, and managing cardiopulmonary arrest in the infant and child.

These programs will meet the American Red Cross “Challenge Course” requirements for certification and are recognized by the Florida Board of Dentistry.
